Court Spares 'Under God'

Technicality scuttles legal challenge to Pledge of Allegiance

WASHINGTON | The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday allowed millions of schoolchildren to keep affirming loyalty to one nation "under God" but dodged the underlying question of whether the Pledge of Allegiance is an unconstitutional blending of church and state.

The ruling overturned a lower court decision that the religious reference made the pledge unconstitutional in public schools. But the decision did so on technical grounds, ruling the man who brought the case on behalf of his 10-year-old daughter could not legally represent her.

The outcome does not prevent a future court challenge over the same issue, however, and both defenders and opponents of the current wording predicted that fight will come quickly.

For now, five justices said the court could not rule on the case because California atheist Michael Newdow does not have full custody of his daughter.

Three other justices went along with the outcome, but seemed to accuse the majority of using Newdow's legal standing as a fig leaf to avoid the harder constitutional issue. The three, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Clarence Thomas, made clear that they would have upheld the religious reference.

The court's ninth justice, Antonin Scalia, removed himself from the case after making off-the-bench remarks that seemed to telegraph his view that the pledge is constitutional.

Before 1954, when the United States was in the middle of the Cold War, the pledge did not include a reference to God. In adding it, members of Congress said they wanted to set the United States apart from "godless communists." ANNE GEARAN (AP)

GARDENING | Getting Their Goats Helena, Mont., is going decidedly low-tech to solve its weed problem. Officials plan to spend $11,000 to lease 850 goats to feed on the Dalmatian toadflax, leafy spurge and spotted knapweed that choke Mount Helena. "The weeds didn't come in overnight, and we're not going to take care of it overnight," said Joe Dooling, who owns the goats and leases them to ranchers for weed control. Helena's weed-fighting plan includes use of chemicals after the goats leave. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

HEADGEAR

Like a Very Fancy Viking

Yes, that's American actress Alicia Witt, but no, she's not practicing for a role in a Norse fable. She's modeling what Christie's auction house in London says is the most expensive hat ever made, clocking in at $2,700,000. According to Christie's, the hat, designed by celebrity headwear creator Louis Mariette, is covered entirely in dazzling diamonds and inspired by entwined ivy and bluebells. Sadly, it's not for sale at auction. Put your wallets away. (EXPRESS)

HEALTH He's Got Plenty Of Iron in His Diet

Vietnamese doctors removed three metal construction rods from a man's stomach about a month after he swallowed them in a rice whiskey drinking challenge, an official said Monday. Huynh Ngoc Son, 22, swallowed the rods, which were 6.7 inches long and about a quarter-inch thick, after being dared by his drinking buddies in mid-May, said Dr. Le Quang Nghia of Binh Dan Hospital in Ho Chi Minh City. Son went to the hospital last week complaining of serious stomach pains. The rods were removed during a 30-minute operation, and Son's stomach was not seriously damaged by the ordeal, Nghia said. AVIATION It's a Bird! It's a Plane! It's a Problem

A US Airways jet struck a bird after landing early Monday and veered off a runway at Pittsburgh International Airport because the mishap disabled a steering mechanism, authorities said. The Boeing 737 carrying 92 passengers from Charlotte, N.C., became mired in mud around 3:30 a.m. No one was injured. US Airways spokeswoman Amy Kudwa said the bird was a turkey, but airport spokeswoman JoAnn Jenny said crews found a dead owl beside the runway. (AP)

RECORDS Bond Would Be Proud

Dressed in a dinner jacket and bow tie, British tycoon Richard Branson on Monday broke a French-held record for crossing the English Channel between Britain and France on an amphibious vessel. The Virgin Group chief completed the 22-mile crossing on his shiny black Gibbs Aquada amphibious craft in one hour, 40 minutes, six seconds—well below the record of six hours held by two Frenchmen. The entrepreneur, who set a trans-Atlantic speedboat record in 1986, was attempting his latest feat to celebrate the 20th anniversary of his Virgin Atlantic airline. (AP)

POLITICS

Short-Termer

Noel Carino ran for the Philippine House of Representatives in 2001, but it took him three years to be declared the winner—just in time for him to enjoy his office for one day as Congress ended its session Friday. Carino, a businessman, lost the 2001 elections in an initial tally, but a recount later showed he won by 2,000 votes. His opponent, however, appealed to the Supreme Court. On Thursday, the court ruled in Carino's favor, and he was sworn in Friday, Congress's last working day. (AP)

U.S. Again Urges Americans To Leave Saudi Arabia

The U.S. government renewed its call on Monday for Americans to leave Saudi Arabia after the recent terrorist attacks, saying the safety of U.S. workers was more important than any effect on oil supplies or the Saudi economy. An estimated 35,000 Americans have been working in Saudi Arabia and it was unclear how many have left since the increase in attacks. (AP)

Social Security Expected To Last Longer — Until 2052

Social Security's long-term prospects are better than previously thought, a congressional report said Monday, estimating the program won't become insolvent until 2052, a decade later than projected earlier this year. The report by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office still paints a bleak financial picture for the future of the retirement system, which faces significant strain as the aging baby boom generation retires. DELIGHT: Former President Bill Clinton laughs Monday along with Chelsea Clinton, left, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., center, and Laura Bush, right, as President Bush tells a story during the White House unveiling of the Clinton portraits.

Bush Offers Clinton Praise and a Portrait

WASHINGTON | With old political grudges left unmentioned, former President Bill Clinton returned to the White House for the first time Monday and listened with delight as President George W. Bush praised him for his knowledge, compassion and "the forward-looking spirit that Americans like in a president."

The occasion was the unveiling of the official portraits of Clinton and his wife, Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Facing re-election and trying to reach across party lines for support, Bush went out of his way to be gracious to both the former president and his wife.

Bush's remarks "proved once again that in the end, we are held together by this grand system of ours that permits us to debate and struggle and fight for what we believe is right," Clinton said.

Alleged al Qaeda Plan for Ohio Mall

Somali native charged with scheming to bomb shopping center

WASHINGTON | A Somali man has been charged with plotting to bomb an Ohio shopping mall, pursuing the type of vulnerable target in the nation's heartland that U.S. officials have been warning that terrorists want to strike.

The four-count indictment returned by a grand jury in Columbus, Ohio, alleges that Nuradin Abdi conspired with convicted al Qaeda member Iyman Faris — an al Qaeda operative who sought to sabotage the Brooklyn Bridge — and others to detonate explosives at an unidentified mall in the Columbus area.

Abdi, 32, was arrested at his Columbus apartment by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents Nov. 28, the day after Thanksgiving when malls across America were crowded with shoppers.

Charges in the indictment, handed up Thursday and unsealed Monday, include providing material support to al Qaeda, conspiracy to provide material support and document fraud. The FBI repeatedly has warned al Qaeda might shift away from attempting to hit tightly guarded installations to more vulnerable targets such as malls, apartment buildings or hotels.

Court papers filed by the government allege that a plot dated to March 2000 when Abdi returned from a terrorist training camp in Ethiopia to join Faris in Columbus.

Attorney General John Ashcroft said at a news conference in Washington that the charges serve as a reminder that al Qaeda is determined "to hit the United States and hit us hard." CURT ANDERSON (AP)

Court Nixes Suit on Off-Road Vehicles

WASHINGTON | The Supreme Court on Monday blocked a lawsuit that accused the federal government of doing too little to protect undeveloped Western land from off-road vehicles.

The court, on a 9-0 vote, said that environmental groups cannot use courts to force the federal Bureau of Land Management to safeguard about 2 million acres of potential wilderness in Utah.

The Supreme Court had been asked to clarify when an agency can be sued for failing to follow a congressional mandate. (AP)

Bush, Kerry Back on Trail

Candidates put brakes on campaign ads while mourning Reagan

WASHINGTON | President George W. Bush and his Democratic challenger John Kerry are returning to the campaign trail, both stressing their plans for the U.S. economy after avoiding overt politicking during the mourning period for former President Ronald Reagan.

Bush this week is highlighting his efforts to create jobs and fight terrorists. Kerry is traveling to three states to outline what he would do to increase employment in America and strengthen the middle class.

Both resumed television ads after a one-day hiatus Friday, the day Reagan was buried.

After a trip Monday to the state of Missouri to talk up health care, Bush will meet at the White House on Tuesday with Afghan President Hamid Karzai.

Bush will deliver an economic speech Thursday, and Friday he'll address troops in the state of Washington.

TV viewers will see an ad that stresses his record on the economy twice as often this week. It says Bush has enacted the "largest tax relief in history" and boasts of record home ownership, low inflation, low interest rates and job growth.

An Associated Press survey conducted last week found that while respondents may be gaining confidence in the economy, 57 percent said the nation had lost jobs in the past six months.

That contrasts with government reports that nearly 1.2 million jobs have been added in the past six months.

Kerry

The Kerry campaign says Bush is painting an overly rosy picture of the economy.

"Health care costs are going up. Tuition is going up. Gas prices are going up. The American family's pocketbook is getting tighter and tighter," said Kerry spokeswoman Stephanie Cutter. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

Painkillers May Spark Headaches

WASHINGTON | One after another, teenagers trickle into Dr. David Rothner's office with the same complaint: almost daily headaches, despite popping over-the-counter painkillers four, then six, then eight times a week.

Many get a diagnosis of rebound headache, a vicious cycle where the more painkiller some people use, the more likely new headaches are to crop up between doses.

Of 680 patients referred to the hospital's pediatric headache center, 22 percent were overusing non-prescription headache medicine — meaning at least three doses a week for more than six weeks.

So how often should people use OTC painkillers for headache? Rothner says no more than twice a week.

Neurologist Dr. David Dodick notes that new International Headache Society criteria say using any painkiller more than nine days a month can signal the person is a candidate for headache prevention therapy instead.

Hispanic, Asian Populations Growing

WASHINGTON | Explosive growth among Hispanics and Asians fueled a surge in the U.S. population between 2000 and 2003 as the national count pushed closer to 300 million.

The number of Hispanics, the nation's largest minority group, rose 13 percent between April 2000 and July 2003 to 39.9 million, according to Census Bureau figures released Monday. That far outpaced the 3 percent increase in the American populace during the same time, to 290.8 million.

Asians were the next-fastest-growing large minority group, up 12.6 percent to 11.9 million, while the black population rose nearly 4 percent to 37 million. (AP)

Rush-Hour Bomb Shatters Baghdad

3 GE contract workers killed in latest attack on Westerners in Iraq

BAGHDAD | A car bomb shattered a convoy of Westerners in Baghdad Monday, killing at least 13 people, including three General Electric workers and two bodyguards. Crowds rejoiced after the attack, dancing around a charred body and shouting "Down with the USA!"

The blast, during the morning rush hour near busy Tahrir Square, was the second vehicle bombing in Baghdad in as many days. It came only two weeks before the formal end of the U.S.-led occupation.

Iraq's interior minister said he believed foreigners carried out the attack, and Prime Minister Iyad Allawi accused Jordanian-born terrorist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi of trying to disrupt the transfer of sovereignty. Al-Zarqawi, believed to have contacts with al Qaeda, is accused in last month's decapitation of American Nicholas Berg.

Moments after the thunderous blast, young men raced into the street, hurling stones at the flaming wreckage and looting personal belongings of the victims. Youths taunted American troops. Iraqi police stood by helplessly. After failing to restrain the crowd, the troops and police withdrew.

The victims included one American, two Britons, one Frenchman and one victim of undetermined nationality, officials said. The foreign victims were helping to rebuild power plants, Allawi said. (AP)

Iraqi Leader Says U.S. Will Hand Over Saddam

BAGHDAD | The United States will hand over Saddam Hussein and all other detainees to the new Iraqi government over the next two weeks as sovereignty is restored to the Iraqi authorities, Interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi said Monday.

"Saddam and the others will be delivered to the Iraqis," Allawi told Al-Jazeera television. The status of the ousted ruler has been the subject of discussion as the formal end of the occupation approaches.

Saddam was granted prisoner of war status after he was captured in December. Although he is alleged to have committed crimes against his own people, he has not been formally charged.

The spokeswoman of the International Committee of the Red Cross said authorities must file charges against Saddam or let him go when sovereignty is transferred. "If he is not charged, then the law says that at the end of war, of occupation, he should be released," Nada Doumani told AP Television News. (AP)

U.S. Prison Review Prompts Changes At Afghan Jails

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | The U.S. military promised Monday to improve its prison regime in Afghanistan after a top general inspected the network of 20 secretive jails where three detainees have died.

The military refused to say how procedures will be changed at the jails, where former prisoners have said they were beaten and sexually abused. But a spokesman promised "comprehensive" information would be made public within weeks.

Lt. Gen. David Barno, the U.S. commander in Afghanistan, ordered the prison review last month. He pledged rapid action if faults were found, but said techniques used on suspects will remain classified.

Brig. Gen. Charles Jacoby visited all the U.S. holding facilities. Spokesman Lt. Col. Tucker Mansager said some changes were being implemented based on Jacoby's interim findings. He said the final report will be complete within days, and some findings will be made public by early July. (AP)

U.N. Nuclear Chief Scolds Iran, Urges 'Full Cooperation'

VIENNA, AUSTRIA | A key meeting of the International Atomic Energy Agency moved Monday toward a sharp rebuke of Iran for delaying a probe into its suspect nuclear activities.

Diplomats at the 35-nation IAEA board of governors' meeting took their cue from agency chief Mohamed ElBaradei, who urged Tehran to replace foot-dragging with "full cooperation," saying his agency's inquiry "can't go on forever."

The agency is chiefly concerned with contradictory, missing or withheld information on the scope of Iran's uranium enrichment program, and the source of enriched uranium found in the country. "The way they have been engaging us on these issues has been less than satisfactory," ElBaradei told reporters.

Kenneth Brill, the chief U.S. delegate, said ElBaradei's comments amounted to a "very firm message that Iran needed to do much better than it has been doing." (AP)

Clerics Decry Saudi Attacks

2 close to bin Laden condemn spate of killings

RIYADH, SAUDI ARABIA | Six Saudi clerics who once espoused Islamic radicalism condemned a wave of attacks on Westerners, part of the kingdom's efforts to rally its people against al Qaeda's stepped-up campaign to oust the ruling family.

The Saudi government allowed the six clerics — all of whom have past links to militants and have served prison time — to issue their statement condemning the attacks on the state news agency.

"We condemn the criminal acts committed by the deviant group in a number of Saudi areas in which many innocent people were killed," they said in the statement.

At least two of the six clerics who signed the condemnation, Safar bin Abdul Rahman al-Hawali and Salman al-Awdah, were once close to Osama bin Laden. Bin Laden praised them in videotapes a few years ago, thanking them for their support and for "enlightening" Muslim youth.

Meanwhile, the U.S. ambassador in Saudi Arabia, James C. Oberwetter, met Monday with relatives of two Americans who were the latest victims of militant attacks: Kenneth Scroggs, who was gunned down in his garage, and Paul M. Johnson, who was kidnapped.

Scroggs was the third Westerner killed in a week. On June 8, American Robert Jacobs also was killed in his parking garage, and an Irish television cameraman was killed two days earlier.

Oberwetter said he told the relatives that Saudi authorities have assured him they were "doing everything possible to resolve this kidnapping case." SALAW NASRAWI (AP)

Israel Takes Over Acres Of Farmland

Palestinians say land being expropriated for controversial barrier

JERUSALEM | Israel has expropriated thousands of acres of Palestinian farmland deep in the West Bank for the most controversial segment of its separation barrier, Palestinian officials said Monday.

Israel began building the barrier last year, to keep out Palestinian militants who have killed hundreds of Israelis since the outbreak of fighting in 2000.

The latest land seizures are part of construction of a segment near the Israeli settlement of Ariel. If Israel builds the barrier to include Ariel on the "Israeli" side, it would mean cutting a wedge halfway through the northern part of the West Bank, which is claimed by Palestinians for a future state.

Asaf Shariv, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's spokesman, said that only an east-west section of the barrier is being built now, leaving open the option of encircling Ariel.

Meanwhile, residents of a nearby village were informed that 4,500 acres of land are being expropriated for a 2-mile stretch of barrier, said Annan Elashkar, a Palestinian liaison officer with Israel. (AP)

Uganda Doles Out Free AIDS Drugs

KAMPALA, UGANDA | Uganda on Monday began distributing free generic HIV drugs in an effort to treat all of the country's estimated 100,000 people living with AIDS.

Uganda is the second country in Africa to launch such a program, Health Minister Jim Muhwezi said. Botswana distributes brand-name drugs to all who need it.

The United Nations will give $70 million to fund the program, Muhwezi said. Uganda also expects funding from the U.S. government, which pledged $15 billion to finance the global fight against AIDS.

Uganda has waged one of the most successful battles against the spread of HIV, bringing the infection rate down from more than 30 percent in the early 1990s to around 6 percent last year. (AP)

The party buys seeds in bulk from Canadian suppliers, then sells packs of 10 for up to $300. While Canadian law prohibits the possession, cultivation and sale of marijuana, the seeds have so little tetrahydrocannabinol, the psychoactive ingredient in pot, that a judge could rule that they are not a drug, legal experts said. 'Isn't She a Little Young?'

Va. campaign seeks to discourage men from having sex with girls

RICHMOND, VA. | Billboards, posters and drink coasters will deliver a state campaign to dissuade older men from having sex with underage girls.

The Department of Health will bring the campaign to northern Virginia, Richmond and Roanoke in June and July. The campaign is modeled on a pilot project in July 2003 in Hampton Roads, which the department deemed a success.

The campaign is aimed at reducing the number of young girls who have had children fathered by older men.

In 1999 and 2000, men over 18 were responsible for 219 births involving girls who were 13 and 14, the department said in a release Monday.

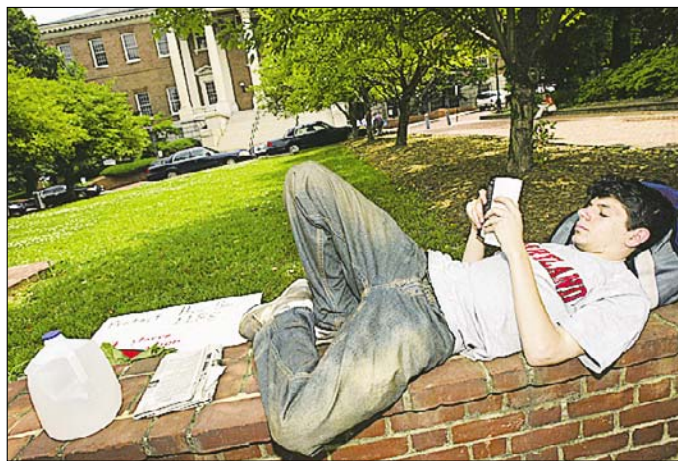

The department said men older than 21 are three times more likely than junior high school boys to father children with junior high school girls.

Messages such as "Isn't she a little young?" and "Sex with a minor, don't go there" are intended to reduce statutory rape and what the department calls sexual coercion.

The campaign's message will be on outdoor billboards, 225,000 postcards and coasters and napkins in approximately 150 bars, restaurants and retail establishments in Richmond, Roanoke, Arlington, Falls Church and Alexandria. (AP)

Arson Suspected in 3 Fires At Incomplete Arts Center

Three small fires were deliberately set early Monday at a concert hall under construction at the Strathmore Hall Arts Center, causing $500,000 in damage, fire officials said. There did not appear to be any structural damage to the almost-completed building — but some drywall and other construction materials were destroyed. No one was hurt. (AP)

Leaders Promise to Find Jobs for District's Youth

Program's goal is to secure summer work for 14- to 21-year-olds

WASHINGTON | Faced with an unemployment rate hovering just below seven percent, local political and business leaders in the District of Columbia launched a push Monday to find summer jobs. They set an ambitious goal of guaranteeing a month's employment for any young D.C. resident willing to work.

After placing 5,494 young people in jobs last summer, D.C. Mayor Anthony A. Williams is hoping to nearly double that number this year.

The D.C. Youth Champions Campaign is designed to get employers to sponsor 14- to 21-year-olds for one month's employment beginning July 13 at a cost of $1,000. The goal is to create positions paying $6.15-$12 per hour.

The D.C. government has committed $5 million to the program.

The city's Department of Employment Services has already registered more than 9,200 youths and expects final registration to top 10,000. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Oken's Lawyers Push for Delay

Judge expected to rule Tuesday whether execution should go on GREENBELT, MD. | With their legal options dwindling, lawyers for convicted murder Steven Oken asked U.S. District Court Judge Peter J. Messitte Monday to delay Oken's execution, scheduled for this week.

Messitte said after hearing about two hours of arguments that he would make a decision Tuesday morning.

While state law prohibits corrections officials from giving the exact time of the execution, Messitte asked if it would be OK if he issued his ruling by 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Oken was sentenced to death for the 1987 rape and murder of Dawn Marie Garvin in Baltimore County. The 42-year-old also has been convicted of killing another woman in Baltimore County and a motel clerk in Maine.

Oken's defense team lost two motions in the state Court of Appeals Monday, including a request for a stay of execution and for permission to appeal a Baltimore Circuit Court decision refusing to His lawyers also have a motion for a stay of execution pending in the U.S. Supreme Court.

Fred Warren Bennett, Oken's lead attorney, said he has filed a request for clemency with Gov. Robert Ehrlich. The governor has agreed to withhold a decision until all legal appeals are exhausted, he said. TOM STUCKEY (AP)

Top Court Refuses Phone Rules Case

Supreme Court won't intervene to continue network-sharing rules

TELECOMMUNICATIONS | The Supreme Court refused Monday to intervene and temporarily save federal regulations that force regional phone carriers to share their networks with competitors at discounted rates.

The court refused to grant a stay sought by AT&T, MCI and an association of state utility regulators. The decision means that government network-sharing rules intended to make local phone service more competitive will expire Tuesday.

The expiring FCC rules allowed states to require the regional carriers — Verizon, BellSouth, Qwest and SBC — to lease parts of their networks at low prices in an effort to boost competition for local phone service. In March, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said the government had not justified a need for the rules. The Bush administration decided last week not to ask the Supreme Court to review the lower court's decision.

The regional companies said the decision would have no immediate effect on service or prices. Long-distance companies, which want a bigger share of the local market, said it could lead eventually to higher rates and less competition.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Michael Powell said Monday he has received written assurances from the regional phone companies that they will keep prices at current levels until the

Starz Offers Its Movies for Download

ENTERTAINMENT | RealNetworks Inc. and Starz Encore Group started offering movies Monday through the Internet for a monthly fee.

The $12.95-per-month Starz! Ticket service will offer 100 movies at any given time. The movies will be culled from the Starz cable channels. While video stores receive movies six months after they hit the theaters, Starz and other cable channels have to wait a year.

A movie contains about 500 megabytes of data, which will take nearly two hours to download on a 600 kilobit-per-second connection — the minimum required by the service. (AP)

WET ONES: Merel Adriaanse, 7 months old, swims to her mother, Frederieke, at a Waterbabies class in Bellevue, Wash.

Losing the Baby Fat

Awww! Look at the wee babies exercise!

INFANTS | As the country's population of overweight children swells, parents are flocking to baby exercise classes where tots as young as one day old can start getting fit.

While mainstream medical experts remain dubious, baby fitness advocates say getting babies and toddlers involved in exercise can set them up for a life of good health and improve motor skills and parent-child bonding.

Yoga comes naturally to babies, who often learn the positions independently as they develop, said

Helen Garabedian, author of "Itsy Bitsy Yoga," who works with babies as young as three weeks old. Babies will commonly move into "downward dog" just before they begin crawling, said Garabedian.

But do the kids really understand what they're doing?

At Christine Roberts's Nurturing Pathways class in Kirkland, Wash., babies as young as two months participate in various movement and stretching activities. The class uses music and props to keep the babies focused, Roberts said.

Even though such classes are fun, medical experts say they do little to make babies physically fit. Very young children aren't capable of the sustained exercise needed to improve cardiovascular health, strength and flexibility, said Dr. Eric Small, chair of the American Academy of Pediatrics committee on sports medicine and fitness, and author of the book "Kids and Sports."

"Fitness is an adult concept," Small said. KRISTEN GELINEAU (AP)

Bread Defender

DIETS | A baker who lost nearly half his customers to the low-carb craze has tapped Dan Brown's best-selling novel for an Atkins alternative called the "Da Vinci Diet," which he hopes will bring people back to bread.

A little math theory kneaded with biblical lore from "The Da Vinci Code" has transformed Stephen Lanzaletta into a dietary sage, answering the "carbohydrate question" with a series of lectures promoting a diet he has followed for decades to maintain a muscular Dieting just isn't dieting without values derived from the Egyptian pyramids.

160 pounds into middle age.

Admittedly, he is neither a nutritionist nor a scholar — his background is in biology and biochemistry. But Lanzaletta argues that people have been eating bread for too long for it suddenly to be the reason everyone is fat.

"Human civilization and grain have ties that go way back. No municipal society evolved without grain, no matter what it was," said Lanzaletta.

His diet uses a complicated formula he created that relies on the value of phi, a number discovered by ancient mathematicians, used to build the pyramids, and featured prominently in Brown's book.

The value, 1.618, is known as the "golden ratio." It has long fascinated artists, philosophers and mathematicians. Taking into account factors including body type, the diet typically breaks down to 52 percent carbohydrates, 20 percent protein and 28 percent fat.

"I'm not suggesting that we eat more bread," Lanzaletta said. "I'm just trying to look at the problems with eating only meat."

Double the Password

SECURITY | To access her bank account online, Marie Jubran opens a Web browser and types in her Swedish national ID number along with a four-digit password.

For additional security, she then pulls out a card that has 50 scratch-off codes. Jubran uses the codes, one by one, each time she logs on or performs a transaction. Her bank, Nordea PLC, automatically sends a new card when she's about to run out.

As more Web sites demand passwords, scammers are getting more clever about stealing them. Hence the need for such "passwords-plus" systems.

A card with scratch-off passcodes.

Scandinavian countries are among the leaders as many online businesses abandon static passwords in favor of so-called two-factor authentication.

With two-factor authentication, having a password alone is useless.

Belgian company Vasco Data Security International issues devices the size of pocket calculators or keychains. You type your regular password into the device for a second code that is based on the time and the unit's unique characteristics. That's the code you type into the Web site. Someone who steals your device won't have your password; someone who steals your password won't have your device.

MasterCard International Inc. has been testing similar systems in Britain, Germany and Brazil. Swipe a credit card with a smart chip into a special reader, enter your PIN and obtain a password good only once at Office Max, British Airways and a dozen other merchants.

In Singapore, bank customers wishing to designate new accounts for fund transfers must likewise obtain a second password — through a phone call, e-mail or mobile text messaging.

Biometric systems are similar, except a fingerprint or iris scan replaces one or both passwords.

In the United States, use of two-factor authentication remains limited. RSA Security Inc. has several products, including RSA SecurID, but they are primarily issued to employees for remote network access and to customers with high-value portfolios. ANICK JESDANUN (AP)

Upcoming Book Charges Armstrong With Doping

A former staff member with the team of cyclist Lance Armstrong claims in an upcoming book that the five-time Tour de France champion asked her to dispose of used syringes and lend him makeup to conceal needle marks on his arms. In David Walsh's "L.A. Confidential, the Secrets of Lance Armstrong," Emma O'Reilly said Armstrong asked her to dispose of a black bag containing used syringes after the Tour of the Netherlands in 1998. O'Reilly acknowledged she did not know what was in the syringes, according to the book. (AP)

Former baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth was appointed chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee's new board of directors Monday, two decades after leading the Los Angeles Games to a record profit. Ueberroth, 66, will lead the 11-person volunteer board in setting USOC policy and overseeing its finances. As chief organizer of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, Ueberroth helped the games turn a $225 million profit. (AP)

Reds' Griffey Rests During Quest for 500th Home Run

Ken Griffey Jr. was out of the starting lineup Monday night in Philadelphia, giving him a better chance to hit his 500th home run at home in Cincinnati. Griffey hit No. 499 on Sunday. The decision to give him a day off for rest was a mutual one with manager Dave Miley, and Griffey was available to pinch-hit. Cincinnati starts a three-game series at home against Texas on Tuesday night. (AP)

L.A. on brink of elimination entering Game 5

NBA FINALS | Oh, great Zen Master, what now?

How do you turn dysfunction into function? How do you unbreak what is so obviously broken? Can this marriage be saved? Is hope not lost?

"Well, right now I don't think there's a challenge that's as imminent as this perhaps since the '95 season when we had to restructure and remake the Chicago Bulls," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said as his Los Angeles Lakers, trailing the Detroit Pistons 3-1 in the NBA Finals, prepared for Game 5.

Those preparations did not include practice. Jackson gave the Lakers a day off aside from their fly-by at The Palace to publicly address the possibility of having their season end Tuesday night in Detroit.

Dressed for summer vacation, they insisted they aren't ready for it to start. "Understand that history is not necessarily on their side either," Kobe Bryant said.

Indeed, no home team has ever won the middle three games in the finals since the NBA switched to a 2-3-2 format in 1985.

Orioles' Slide Continues In 14-0 Loss to Indians

BASEBALL | Jake Westbrook pitched a four-hitter for his first major league shutout and the Cleveland Indians trounced the Baltimore Orioles 14-0 Monday for their fourth straight win.

John McDonald, getting a rare start and batting only .107, got a career-high four hits and Lou Merloni had two of the Indians' eight doubles.

Cleveland scored seven times in the third inning and led 14-0 after five.

The Orioles lost for the sixth time in nine games.

Westbrook (6-2) struck out four and walked two in his third career complete game. This was his 43rd start in the majors.

Westbrook has won three of his last four starts and hasn't lost since May 22.

The game was a makeup from a May 2 rainout at Jacobs Field.

Eric DuBose (4-5) was charged with eight runs in 2 2-3 innings. He gave up six hits and walked four.

The Indians roughed up Rick Bauer for six runs in the fifth. (AP)

Cleveland's Jody Gerut slides into home plate ahead of Baltimore catcher Javy Lopez's tag to score one of the Indians' 14 runs in Monday afternoon's game.

Furyk Plans to Defend Open Title

Wrist injury has sidelined star since March

GOLF | U.S. Open champion Jim Furyk, expected to be out until July while recovering from wrist surgery, showed up at Shinnecock Hills in Southampton, N.Y., this weekend and said he planned to defend his title.

"Obviously, being here is a big step," Furyk said on Monday before playing nine holes.

Furyk said he would play nine holes each practice round at Shinnecock Hills before deciding whether he is strong enough to play when the tournament begins on Thursday. He said there was no risk of further injuring his wrist unless he did something "really violent" with the club.

Furyk, who tied the 72-hole scoring record at Olympia Fields last year for his first victory at a major, had surgery on March 22 to repair torn cartilage in his left wrist.

He said then he would be out for three to six months. That made the U.S. Open a long shot at best, and even raised questions about whether he could play in the Ryder Cup.

But the recovery went quickly, and Furyk played his first full round last Wednesday at Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla. By Friday morning, he was looking for a place to stay on Long Island.

"I'm not fooling myself. I'm not fooling anybody else," Furyk said. "I haven't played tournament golf in six months. I'll be grinding it out." (AP)

RETURN OF THE CHAMP: Jim Furyk, expected to be out of action for three to six months, will try to play this weekend's U.S. Open after having surgery in March.

Supreme Court to Hear Title IX Case

EQUALITY | The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear an appeal from a former girls' basketball coach who claims he was fired when he complained that his players got second-class facilities and less money than the boys' teams.

Roderick Jackson wants to sue under Title IX, the 1972 federal law best known for greatly expanding women's participation in sports.

The law's reach is actually much broader, barring sex discrimination in "any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

At issue is whether Title IX allows lawsuits alleging retaliation against people who, such as Jackson, try to make sure that schools do not shortchange women athletes or students. It is already settled that students, parents or others can sue under Title IX to correct alleged inequalities.

Jackson claims that he received poor performance reviews after he complained when he discovered that Ensley High School in Birmingham, Ala., denied his team equal funding, equipment and facilities. In May 2001, he was fired as coach.

He's a Magic Man

Cardsharp and actor Ricky Jay has many tricks up his sleeve

PRESTIDIGITATION | In the TV western "Deadwood," Ricky Jay plays a craps dealer and con man named Eddie Sawyer, and not since the World War II hero Audie Murphy played a World War II hero has a role been so cunningly cast.

Jay is perhaps the world's greatest sleight-of-hand artist as well as a leading scholar of prestidigitation and illusion. That HBO's "Deadwood," set in an 1870s gold-mining camp in what is now South Dakota, would make keen use of Jay's arcane knowledge is no accident; he's also one of the scriptwriters.

Jay has a devoted following, and though his fans appreciate him in "Deadwood," many also worry that the series and his movie career might cut into his stage performances, which are already as rare as a royal flush.

His breakthrough show in New York City, 1994's "Ricky Jay and His 52 Assistants," sold out all performances and won an Obie before he took it to cities on five continents.

Eight years later, his off-Broadway show "Ricky Jay: On the Stem" played before a packed house for six months.

Responding to a magazine account of a poker trick

Jay performed privately, a magician wrote that the feat could not be carried out. Jay went on to perform the trick every night in his off-Broadway show.

While other magicians rely on smoke and mirrors or leggy assistants or computerized pyrotechnics to distract, the essence of Jay's artistry is its disarming directness.

Jay's work is so astonishing that even magicians sometimes can't believe it.

Responding to a magazine account of a poker trick Jay performed privately, a magician wrote that the reporter must have been mistaken: The feat could not be carried out. Jay, not one to shrink from a challenge, went on to perform the trick every night in "On the Stem."

"This is the funny thing with magicians," Jay said. "At one level, it's awfully flattering to be able to create a piece that people just thought was the result of some guy in the press being hoodwinked. But it's also why I don't spend a lot of time with magicians."

But he does spend a lot of time on his work. Aside from his role on "Deadwood," he writes, does a weekly public radio show, "Jay's Journal," and heads his consulting firm, Deceptive Practices, which advises moviemakers on plays and special effects. He's acted in 16 movies in as many years.

So is the last great conjurer slowing down?

On the contrary; he always pulls the rabbit out of a hat when he needs to. SMITHSONIAN MAGAZINE (AP)

Summer Lovin'

It's the right season for Bebel Gilberto's sunny bossa nova

MUSIC | Bebel Gilberto's self-titled second album for the world-music label Six Degrees is a summer afternoon in a hammock with the one you love and maybe a tall lemonade.

"Bebel Gilberto" is a sweet, gentle update of the bossa nova sound her father, Joao Gilberto, helped bring to the world. At times, it's almost too gentle, missing the trip hop-grooves the late producer Suba brought to her sublime debut, "Tanto Tempto."

Still, there's enough swing and sizzle to make this a fine album to wile away a lazy day with, and the occasional nods to Afro-beat hint at the inevitable remix album. Until then, more lemonade, please.

Real Mean Girls

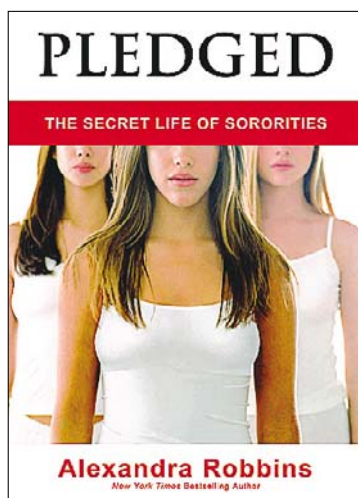

Sisterhood is painful, according to a juicy tell-all about sorority life

BOOKS | Though she starts her book with a description of a sorority tradition called "Pigs' Run" — in which 500 college girls race down a frat-boy-lined street in wet shirts — it was the rite of "boob-ranking" that shocked author Alexandra Robbins more.

"The pledges had a certain amount of time to take off their shirts and their bras and essentially examine each other topless until time was up, and they had to be lined up in order of breast size. That was almost too campy to believe."

Robbins, 27, had already plumbed the world of cover societies in her 2002 book, "Secrets of the Tomb," about the exclusive Yale group Skull and Bones. She went undercover for a year to write "Pledged: The Secret Life of Sororities."

Robbins concentrates on four pledges: Caitlin, who was raped

"The pledges had ... to take off their shirts and their bras and essentially examine each other topless until time was up, and they had to be lined up in order of breast size. That was almost too campy to believe."

ALEXANDRA ROBBINS
ON "BOOB-RANKING," A SORORITY HAZING RITUAL

after a fraternity event but found solace in a sorority leadership role; Vicki, a shy girl; Sabrina, a black girl who encountered financial difficulties and racism; and Amy, who started out enthusiastic but was disappointed. Robbins also interviewed several hundred girls around the country.

She first spent a couple of weeks in a sorority openly, as a writer. But after national administrators found out about her project, she said, she was blocked from tracking members in all the major "historically white" sororities, as she calls them.

(Historically black sororities, she added, focus less on hazing.)

Her next step, then, was to persuade girls to speak secretly, including the four who allowed her to follow their lives for one school year, at a campus she calls State U.

Robbins won't say whether she actually joined a sorority or witnessed certain events, rather than having them described to her. The girls who confided in her could lose their memberships if anyone can identify them, Robbins claimed, "because sororities have stricter rules for dealing with the media than they do about hazing."

Robbins said she found both pluses and minuses in sororities. They can be conduits for making lifelong friends and finding an identity, but need to reform many pledging and hazing traditions.

Abuses she describes include deaths from hazings, vomiting contests (part of a pattern of eating disorders), drinking and drug-taking and pressure to have impersonal sex with fraternity boys. And then there's boob-ranking.

"Animal House," said Robbins, "wasn't that far off."

Stained-Glass Secrets

Looking underneath
Georges Rouault's
colorful paintings

CONSERVATION | To the human eye, brilliant colors and thick black lines mark much of the work by French artist Georges Rouault, considered among the greatest of recent religious painters.

It took a high-tech examination by two American researchers to reveal a deeper mystery: copies of his own black-and-white prints underneath.

Rouault began at age 14 as an apprentice to a maker of stained glass windows. He worked on restoring the famous ones in the cathedral at Chartres.

Rouault eventually came to paint much of his work on paper, laying it flat on a table as he did the stained glass windows of his youth.

I WONDER WHAT'S UNDER: In paintings such as "Circus Trio" (1924), Rouault worked from black-and-white prints, prints that remain below the oil paint surface.

Mary Hannah Byers, curator of an exhibition opening Saturday at The Phillips Collection, said more research is needed on just how much of this paper consists of Rouault's own prints underneath his thousands of paintings.

When the artist's agent died, 800 works were found in the studio Rouault kept in the agent's house.

The artist's lines and colors recall the dark strips of lead that hold together brightly stained church windows. In addition to religious subjects, he portrayed clowns, show people, prostitutes and stern judges.

He did at least eight pictures of the poet Paul Verlaine, whose life of debauchery, Catholicism and falls from grace particularly interested Rouault.

Research for the new exhibit was done by Marla Curtis, now assistant conservator of paintings at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. She collaborated with Sylvia Albro, the Phillips's conservator of paper.

Examining a sample of Rouault's prolific output, they used two main tools. An infrared camera enabled them to distinguish printer's ink from the artist's oil paints. Two lenses of a stereo microscope gave them depth of vision.

Curtis said some writing about Rouault has referred in passing to paintings done on top of prints, but has not recorded the extent to which he used the device.

The exhibit will close Sept. 5.

MURDEROUS, BUT SMOKE-FREE: For the DVD release of "Twisted," Philip Morris wants the character played by Samuel L. Jackson, center, to stub out his butts.

Hold the Smoke

Tobacco companies are asking that their products be unplaced

COMMERCE | In Paramount Pictures' recent film "Twisted," Samuel L. Jackson portrays a police commissioner who, at one dramatic moment, lights up a Marlboro cigarette.

Marlboro maker Philip Morris USA didn't request the plug, but it would seem to be a welcome publicity windfall, particularly now that cigarettes can no longer be advertised on billboards, television or through product placements.

Instead, Philip Morris owner Altria Group Inc. is asking the studio behind "Twisted" to go back to the editing room — to take the Marlboros out.

Facing unprecedented pressure to reduce the allure of cigarettes to youth, major cigarette marketers are making an unexpected new plea to Hollywood: remove references to cigarette brands from films and scripts.

Earlier this year, at the urging of California's attorney general, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Holdings Inc. asked Sony Corp.'s Sony Pictures Entertainment to edit its products out of the movie "Mona Lisa Smile." The film prominently showed a Camel ad and a college-age character smoking Winston cigarettes. "You do not have permission to mention or depict our brands in your films," warned RJR lawyer Guy M. Blynn in a Jan. 16 letter to the studio.

So far, both studios have refused to alter their films. A spokeswoman for Paramount Pictures noted that editing "Twisted" would require a lot of work and the studio refused.

Sony said that it supports the creative vision of its filmmakers. "Mona Lisa Smile" is an accurate depiction of the 1950s, a time when it was common for both men and women to smoke," said Steve Elzer, a Sony spokesman. "We will not alter the film in any way." Bad Reputation

A British conductor argues in favor of Mahler's moody work

MUSIC | Orchestral buffs didn't always consider Austria's Gustav Mahler to be one of European music's biggest symphonic guys.

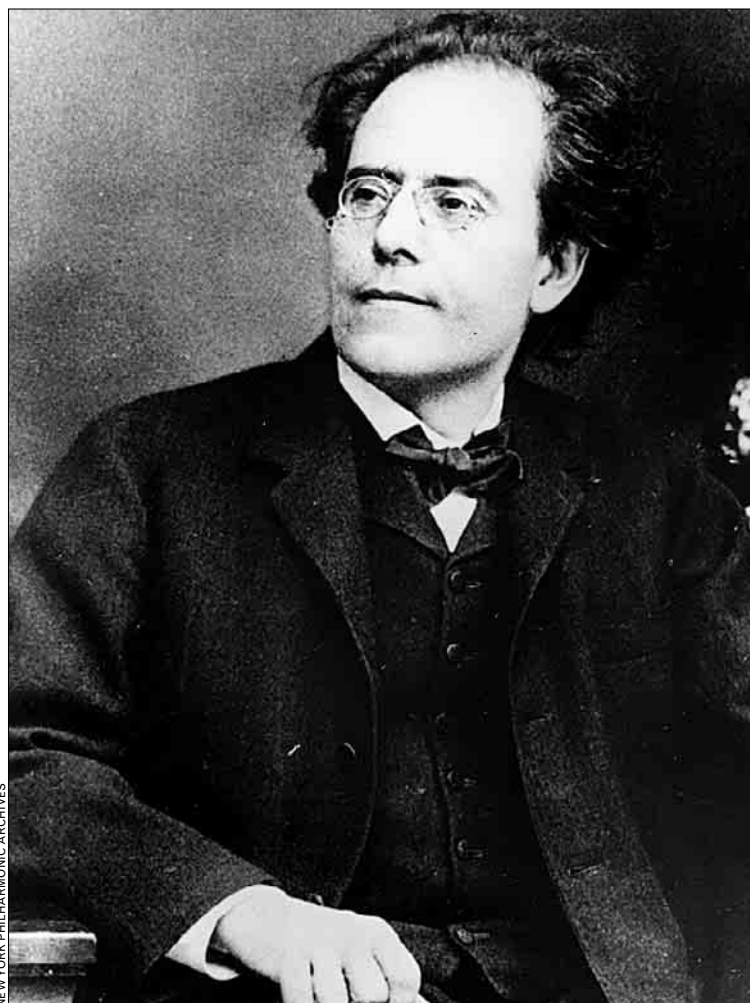

In 1930 Sir John Barbirolli — the English conductor who would go on to record, among much else, probably the most feral version of the feral Verdi Requiem — expressed doubts. "Berlioz and Wagner," Barbirolli wrote, "have done it far more convincingly."

But a music critic of the day who loved Mahler argued successfully to Barbirolli that his own passionate ways mirrored Mahler's; eventually the Brit became a champion of the Austrian's ultra-moody work.

By January 13, 1966, when Barbirolli guest-conducted the Mahler Sixth for the Berlin Philharmonic, a performance which was recorded for posterity, he was the full-blown visiting Mahler advocate.

Meanwhile, Herbert von Karajan, the orchestra's notably self-possessed conductor, continued his anti-Gustav policy.

As captured on this Testament Records release, Barbirolli pulls everything together on "Mahler: Symphony No. 6 in A Minor" the 1966 performance digitally remastered in clear, unshowy

"WOULDN'T YOU SIMPLY DIE WITHOUT MAHLER?" Moody Gustav Mahler in 1909, when he had stepped in as music director of the New York Philharmonic.

mono. Barbirolli proceeds with the warmest, most full-blooded understanding of the intricacies of Mahler's emotional mazes and sub-mazes. You can sort of imagine von Karajan rolling his eyes — this time out of envy.

Two unusual newbies and one classic show release new DVDs

DVDS | Cartoon mainstay "The Simpsons: The Complete Fourth Season" (Fox) keeps getting better on DVD with a four-disc set packing 22 episodes and a great range of extras.

Bonus material includes commentary for each episode, deleted scenes for two episodes, an introduction from creator Matt Groening and a featurette with executive producer James Brooks recounting the infamous war of words among the Simpsons and George and Barbara Bush. (Bush had dreamed of families more like "The Waltons" and less like "The Simpsons"; Bart Simpson's immortal reply: "We're just like the Waltons. We're praying for an end to the Depression, too.").

Tony Shalhoub plays a sagacious but phobia-addled police consultant whose fear of almost everything muddies his efforts to crack bewildering cases in "Monk: Season One" (Universal).

The four-disc set has the first

"The good news is, your surgery went well. The bad news is, I'm psychotic."

13 episodes and five featurettes, including one on the episode that earned Shalhoub an Emmy Award.

On "Nip/Tuck": The Complete First Season," Dylan Walsh and Julian McMahon are plastic surgeons whose crises-ridden personal lives could use a facelift.

Warner Bros.'s five-disc set has 13 episodes, plus 30 minutes of deleted footage and background featurettes that include a look at the show's makeup effects.

Irwin's in Too Deep

CRAZY AUSTRALIANS | "Crocodile Hunter" Steve Irwin is in hot water again, this time for allegedly swimming with two whales in the ocean off Antarctica and getting too close to penguins and seals.

Australian environmental authorities were investigating the allegations that he breached regulations governing how close people can get to wildlife in the Antarctic.

But the exuberant Australian entertainer best known for wrestling crocodiles on his popular television show denied any wrongdoing, saying he had only climbed onto an iceberg after his dry suit ripped while his company was filming the whales.

"... so I grabbed hold of the iceberg and I'm sitting on the iceberg while these whales are just all over us," is how Irwin told it.

He apparently was reported to authorities by people on a passing ship who thought they saw him riding on a whale's back.

Authorities also were concerned about clips of Irwin's upcoming documentary "Ice Breaker," which is due to air on the Animal Planet network on Friday. The clips show Irwin and penguins skimming down a slope, though it is unclear how close he is to the penguins. Another clip shows him lying on rocks close to a leopard seal. MIKE CORDER (AP)

JOE AND ZOE SCHMO

The reality spoof JOE SCHMO (10 p.m., Spike) returns for a second season. If it had a subtitle, it might be "The Revenge of the Actors and Writers." As we all know, reality TV has decimated the ranks of comedy actors and scriptwriters.

"Schmo" offers a cast of comedians the chance to play stereotypical reality-show denizens, including a dumb blonde, an heir, a gay guy and a scheming harpy. They all appear on "Last Chance at Love," a strange his-and-hers variation on "The Bachelor" in which a co-ed cast plays for the affection of two beautiful people, but two players don't know that the whole show is an elaborate put-on. As always, the host is a smarmy, cliché-spouting bore.

While the writers have provided many absurd situations, some of the actors don't quite get the fact that they are supposed to act "real." At one point, Ingrid, the female "mark," remarks, "Everything sounds so scripted ... I feel like I'm on 'The Truman Show.'" Oops.

ARE YOU RIPPED?

NEXT ACTION STAR (8 p.m., NBC) could be the worst idea for a reality show since "Are You Hot?" The show is nothing but boring.

Gumbo Guy v. Motown Legend

A Louisiana chef is suing Smokey Robinson for trademark infringement over a catchy slogan he says he has used for years to sell gumbo and other fare. Johnny "Jambalaya" Percle, who sued the singer last week in federal court, said he had trademarked in 1997 after using it for a decade. Percle's complaint says that Robinson's use of the phrase, "The Soul is in the Bowl," for his line of Louisiana foods is so similar that it will confuse consumers. (AP)

JAMES BROWN told prosecutors in a letter received Monday that he would forgo a jury trial and not contest a domestic violence charge because he wanted to keep his family matters private. The 71-year-old was arrested in January and accused of pushing his wife, Tommie Rae Hynie, to the floor and threatening to kill her. Brown initially said he would fight the charge but instead forfeited his $1,087 bond, which will cover a fine for the offense, according to the prosecutor. (AP)

With her mum grabbing all the news and endorsement deals, Britain's PRINCESS BEATRICE, daughter of Sarah Ferguson and Prince Andrew, has been sorely neglected by the American public. At London's Stella Artois tennis championship on Saturday, the 15-year-old redhead electrified the tabloids by appearing with a young man and proceeding to ignore him, preferring the on-court actions of Andy Roddick. The Lawyer, Whose Real Name Is William Freeman ...

T-BOZ of the female R&B group TLC has filed for divorce from her husband, rapper Mack 10, saying he committed adultery and threatened to kill her. The singer — whose real name is Tionne Tenese Watkins Rolison — also has arranged for a temporary restraining order against the rapper, barring him from coming within 100 yards of her. Mack 10, whose real name is Dedrick D-Mon Rolison, denied the allegations in court documents filed Friday. In them, he said his wife has made the claims "for the sole purpose of attempting to gain an advantage in these proceedings" and to prevent him from seeing their 3-year-old daughter. (AP)

PRINCE HARRY hopes to join the British Army, and plans to take the entrance exam at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst, royal officials announced Monday. Harry is third in line to the throne behind his older brother, Prince William, and his father, Prince Charles. The 19-year-old prince, whose mother was the late Princess Diana, is spending the summer as a coach in the Rugby Football Union and then working on his father's farms. Harry will face the Regular Commissions Board exams to gain entrance to Sandhurst, which consist of a three-day course of written, oral and physical tests. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

I FOUND THE PICTURE of a mother crying over her dead Iraqi son ("Car Bomb in Iraq Kills 12," June 14) completely disgusting. Why does Express feel that printing pictures of blood-drenched Iraqi children is allowable? If the printing of murdered American children is viewed as unethical, how can you justify printing images such as this and exploiting a young Iraqi child and his family in this way?

—HEIDI OUMAROU
Silver Spring, Md.

I AM OFFENDED by how little space your paper gave Ray Charles ("Ray Charles Dies at 73," June 11). I know former President Reagan's funeral took top billing, but your treatment of Charles was disrespectful. To many, especially in the black community, Charles is a far greater hero than Ronald Reagan.

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — When it comes to family decisions, you may have to be the one to be on the side of calm rationale. Others aren't likely to be objective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You'll notice that there is a big difference between what you want and what you actually have. It's time to begin closing that gap.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — A private insight will show you the way — and even those who have been most worried about you recently will be impressed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's important to touch someone and give of yourself freely; if you don't, you'll miss out on an important personal lesson.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — No matter how many times you tell the same outrageous story, it's not likely that anyone will believe you. Just shrug it off and let it go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — This is a good day to share the real you with someone who could, in time, become a valued and trusted partner. Don't hold anything back.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may be confronted by someone who seems to have the edge, but if you are persistent you can turn the tide and be one up for once.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You may be lacking in patience, so you must use your head and steer clear of situations which may cause you to overreact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You're on the verge of an important personal discovery, but don't neglect routine affairs as you progress rapidly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Feel free to express yourself openly and honestly all day long. You'll feel at home in someone else's home during evening hours.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Keep up the momentum, and don't try to stop something that has just gotten started. It's up to you to make sure you don't jump the track.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — What you do in and around the home will have a lasting effect on other aspects of your life. Family matters are in the spotlight.

House of Saud

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

THOMAS W. LIPPMAN, a former Washington Post correspondent in the Middle East and an adjunct scholar at the Middle East Institute, was online Monday to discuss Saudi Arabia and the recent terrorist attacks.

Have you noticed among the general population in Saudi Arabia increasing hostility toward Americans, or foreigners in general?

Hard not to notice when it's in the newspapers and on TV every day. But hostility is not the same as violence. Most Saudis are not violent people.

We hear about either the monarchy or the terrorists in Saudi Arabia. What about the moderate, middle class? Do they exist?

There is indeed a large, mostly moderate, non-violent middle class in Saudi Arabia: business people, civil servants, bankers and agribusiness executives, media people. That's the main reason why I believe that the population does not want the Taliban-style regime that would be imposed by Osama bin Laden and his supporters.

But keep in mind that the Saudis are deeply religious Muslims and Islam is the foundation of the state, which is how they want it. There's not much constituency for secular democracy.

Is the House of Saud ever going to start making noticeable reforms, like allowing women to drive?

This process is already underway. I must say, however, that in many visits to Saudi Arabia going back to 1976, I have never met a Saudi woman who gave a damn about the right to drive; it matters more to us than to them. What is going to force a change in this policy is economics — the country can't afford to keep importing men from Pakistan or wherever to work as chauffeurs for its women.
